^[2]Kincaid Cobb. Educated first in the local schools, she enrolled at Asheville Normal School ^[3] in 1907 and was graduated in 1909. She taught school in Hickory from 1909 to 1913, when she returned to Morganton to begin a newspaper career on the News-Herald ^[4], becoming owner and publisher at the time of her father's death in 1916. She also established the Valdese News ^[5] in 1938.

One of the pioneer women leaders in the North Carolina Press Association ^[6], she served as its secretary-treasurer from 1922 until her death. From 1934 until 1952 she held the office of Democratic national committee-woman from North Carolina. She gained distinction in national Democratic circles and was the only southerner on the five-member committee to advise President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1940 on a successor to James A. Farley, party chairman. Beginning in 1928, she was a delegate to several Democratic National Conventions.

The University of North Carolina ^[7] awarded her an honorary LL.D. in 1949. She was a Methodist and an honorary member of the Morganton Kiwanis Club ^[8]. Many of her writings dealt with her world travel experiences; after she became ill with acute leukemia she took a month's trip to Europe, from which she returned to enter Duke Hospital in Durham, where she died.
