Dedication date: 4/5/1909

Creator: W. H. Mullins Company, Foundry Daniel Boone, VI, Foundry

Materials & Techniques: Copper, Mount Airy granite

Sponsor: Walter Francis Burns, Sr., grandson of Otway Burns, gifted the statue to the county in 1909.

Unveiling & Dedication: Walter Clark, Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, provided the dedicatory address. The unveiling ceremony was attended by a number of Otway Burns' decedents.

Post dedication use: Shortly after the Second World War, the United States Navy presented the town of Burnsville with the ship's bell from the destroyer USS Burns, also named after the Privateer. The bell was for a short time displayed alongside the statue. Today, the town square in which the monument stands is frequently used for community activities, including craft fairs and seasonal stargazing gatherings.

Subject notes: A native of Onslow county, Captain Otway Burns was one of North Carolina's greatest naval heroes in the War of 1812. As a Privateer, he plundered British ships across the Atlantic coast with his schooner, the Snap Dragon. After the war, Burns became an entrepreneur and politician, serving in the North Carolina General Assembly. He lost favor with the eastern counties of the state when he voted to increase representation for the western counties. Burns is still honored in the western portion of the state by the town of Burnsville, named after him. Later in his life, Burns was appointed keeper of the Brant Shoals Light House by President Andrew Jackson.

The statue was given by his grandson, Walter Francis Burns, Sr. Otway Burns was buried in Beaufort, N.C.

The statue was damaged or defaced on a number of occasions, resulting in damage and separation of the sword and bugle. In the 1960s, the Burnsville Garden Club organized restoration of the statue. Daniel Boone, VI, a local smith, crafted a new sword and scabbard and bugle.

Location: The statue sits in the town square in the center of the Main Street traffic circle.

Landscape: The statue sits in the center of the square, in the middle of a circular brick walkway. A lawn with plantings and small shrubs surrounds the walkway.
