Description: This granite and sandstone arch sits on the site of the Fayetteville Independent Light Infantry's historic parade grounds. The granite arch frames a free-standing granite marker inscribed to commemorate the service of the company throughout its 200-year history. The granite crossbeam of the arch's crown is also inscribed, and the structure rests atop a masonry base of granite stones. The granite columns of the arch, which rest on bases ornamented with acanthus leaves, were salvage from the Cumberland County Courthouse destroyed by fire in 1953. The base of the columns with the leaf ornamentation appear to be made from sandstone and were originally installed as the columns' capitals at the entrance to the courthouse.

The inscription on the front face bears that Latin phrase Qui Ne Habeat Famem Pugnae Discedat "He who has not the hunger for this fight, let him depart."

Dedication date: 8/21/1993

Materials & Techniques: Granite, sandstone

Sponsor: The Fayetteville Independent Light Infantry. The granite columns, from the Old Cumberland County Courthouse, were donated by Bruce and Keith Cain of the Fayetteville Monument Company.

Unveiling & Dedication: The dedication was conducted as a military ceremony to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the Fayetteville Independent Light Infantry (F.I.L.I.) and the service of its veterans. All 75 current members of F.I.L.I. were present including veterans from all wars since World War I as well as active service members. The company members were dressed in wool dress uniforms similar to those originally used by the company in the 1800's. The ceremony began with the dedication of a marker at the Fayetteville Arsenal followed by a procession to the Cross Creek Cemetery across from the parade grounds, with the arch dedication following. The celebration featured a color guard with fife and drum players and bagpipers. Company members fired vintage bolt action rifles in a 21-gun salute at the ceremony. Hal Broadfoot, Jr. read the closing remarks from the welcome given by his ancestor Major John Broadfoot at the centennial celebration in 1893. A smaller monument was also dedicated to Isaac Hammond, a free black man, who served as the first fife player for the original company formed in 1793. He is buried somewhere on the parade grounds.

Subject notes: The memorial was dedicated on the Bicentennial of the creation of the Fayetteville Independent Light Infantry Company, reportedly the oldest militia in continuous existence in the South and the second oldest in the country on the date of its dedication. The company was created as an independent militia and legalized by the Militia Act of 1792 and was likely raised in response to fears that the country might become involved in the French Revolutionary Wars or a possible rebellion of enslaved people against their enslavers in Haiti. The organization furnished volunteer troops to all foreign and domestic conflicts from the War of 1812 through World War I. In the Civil War, the F.I.L.I. joined up with the Confederate effort under the 1st North Carolina Volunteers. The company apparently refused to give up their Confederate gray uniforms following the war and enlisted in the Spanish-American War wearing their gray. The company also served in World War I as Company F of the 119th Infantry Regiment. Today the F.I.L.I. are a fraternal service organization and continue to honor their veterans annually.

Location: The arch is located in a park at the intersection of North Cool Spring Street and Meeting Street on the western side of North Cool Spring Street. The park has historically served as the official parade grounds of the Fayetteville Independent Light Infantry. The inscribed faces of the arch face east and west.

Landscape: The memorial arch is located in the lawn of a small park surrounded by pedestrian paths and mature shade trees. Other small memorials are located near the base of the monument.
