

Primary Source: 1835 Amendments to the North Carolina Constitution ^[1]

By the 1830s, pressure for reform was building to a level that the legislature could not, or would not, address. Westerners remained frustrated with their lack of representation in the state government. They lacked access to education and transportation, they enslaved far fewer people than eastern enslavers, and their religious and ethnic diversity also made them a distinct region. During the election of 1833, a question was added to the ballot in thirty-one western counties, asking whether people supported holding a convention to amend the state constitution. The vote was 33,000 to 1,000 in favor of a convention!

By 1835, the Whigs had come to power in North Carolina, and backed by Whig votes, a convention was held at Raleigh to amend the state constitution. The amendments gave more direct power to the people, by providing for direct election of the governor and by giving greater representation to more populous counties. They also disfranchised — took the vote from — free black people, a change that reflected new fears after Nat Turner's Rebellion.

This document contains only the amendments to the state constitution, not the entire new constitution.

Article I.

Section 1.

1. Representation in the Senate

The Senate of this State shall consist of fifty Representatives, ^[2] biennially chosen by ballot, and to be elected by districts; which districts shall be laid off by the General Assembly, at its first session after the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-one; and afterwards, at its first session after the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one; and then every twenty years thereafter, in proportion to the public taxes paid into the Treasury of the State, by the citizens thereof; and the average of the public taxes paid by each county into the Treasury of the State, for the five years preceding the laying off of the districts, shall be considered as its proportion of the public taxes, and constitute the basis of apportionment: Provided, That no county shall be divided in the formation of a Senatorial district. And when there are one or more counties having an excess of taxation above the ratio to form a Senatorial district, ^[3] adjoining a county or counties deficient in such ratio, the excess or excesses aforesaid shall be added to the taxation of the county or counties deficient, and if, with such addition, the county or counties receiving it, shall have the requisite ratio, such county and counties each, shall constitute a Senatorial district.

2. Representation in the House of Commons

The House of Commons shall be composed of one hundred and twenty representatives, biennially chosen by ballot, to be elected by counties according to their federal population, that is, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other persons, and each county shall have at least one member in the House of Commons, although it may not contain the requisite ratio of population.

- This apportionment shall be made by the General Assembly, at the respective times and periods when the districts for the Senate are hereinbefore directed to be laid off; and the said apportionment shall be made according to an ^[4] enumeration to be ordered by the General Assembly, or according to the census which may be taken by order of Congress, next preceding the period of making such apportionment.
- In making the apportionment in the House of Commons, the ratio of representation shall be ^[5] ascertained by dividing the amount of Federal population in the State, after deducting that comprehended within those counties which do not severally contain the one hundred and twentieth part of the entire Federal population aforesaid, by the number of Representatives less than the number assigned to the said counties. To each county containing the said ratio, and not twice the said ratio, there shall be assigned one Representative; to each county containing twice, but not three times the said ratio, there shall be assigned two Representatives, and so on progressively, and then the remaining Representatives shall be assigned severally to the counties having the largest fractions.
