How to Search NCpedia

NCpedia has a number of search and discovery features to help you find content about North Carolina and to help answer your research questions. This page covers these features and also includes tips for searching.

NCpedia home page search features

Keyword searches

You can search NCpedia content using keywords in the same way you would use a keyword to search for content in your Internet browser.

Locate the "Search NCpedia" box in the middle of the home page or at the top right of each article page you visit. You'll find this feature in the middle of the home page just above the words "Explore NCpedia by. . ." (See image -- look for the red circle.)

Type a keyword into the box where you see "Search NCpedia" and then click "Go!". You'll see search results in a new page.

Here are a few examples of keyword searches:

- Let's imagine you want to find information about North Carolina's Piedmont region. Type the word "piedmont" (quotation marks are not needed) into the Search NCpedia box.
- If you were interested in locating information about the culture of the piedmont region, you could type the words "piedmont culture" (no quotation marks are needed).

Popular Topics

NCpedia has organized numerous subject collections to help you find content more easily for commonly researched questions and for some of the most popular North Carolina history and culture topics.

Alphabet Browse

Traditional print encyclopedias are organized alphabetically. NCpedia also has an alphabet browse search feature. You'll find it at the bottom of the "Explore NCpedia by. . ." box. (See image -- look for the green circle and you'll see the alphabet from A to Z.)

Explore by Topic <sup>[9]</sup>

Other features for searching, exploring and discovering NCpedia content

In the search features box you'll also find a number of other options for exploring NCpedia content. You'll find this option below the words "Explore NCpedia by. . ." in eight green buttons (See image -- look for the green circle.)
