

The Bostonians Paying the Excise Man

Share it now!

The Bostonians Paying the Excise Man

This is a 1774 political cartoon titled "Bostonians Paying the Excise Man", or "Tarring and Feathering." It was published in 1774 by London printers Robert Sayer and John Bennett and attributed to London illustrator and engraver Philip Dawe (or Dawes). This illustration shows the tarring and feathering of Boston Commissioner of Customs John Malcolm four weeks after the Boston Tea Party. The perpetrators are shown pouring hot tea down Malcolm's throat. A noose hangs from the Liberty Tree, and the Stamp Act is posted upside down.

Citation (Chicago Style):

Sayer, Robert and John Bennett [firm], and Philip Dawe [illustrator]. "The Bostonians paying the excise man, or tarring and feathering." Illustration. October 31, 1774. Item PC 1 - 5232B, British Cartoon Prints Collection, Library of Congress Prints and Photographs online collection. <http://www.loc.gov/pictures/item/2004673302/>

Available at:

<http://www.loc.gov/pictures/item/2004673302/>

Read the related article: Loyalist Perspective: Violence in Wilmington

Usage Statement:

Public Domain

Public Domain is a copyright term that is often used when talking about copyright for creative works. Under U.S. copyright law, individual items that are in the public domain are items that are no longer protected by copyright law. This means that you do not need to request permission to re-use, re-publish or even change a copy of the item. Items enter the public domain under U.S. copyright law for a number of reasons: the original copyright may have expired; the item was created by the U.S. Federal Government or other governmental entity that views the things it creates as in the public domain; the work was never protected by copyright for some other reason related to how it was produced (for example, it was a speech that wasn't written down or recorded); or the work doesn't have enough originality to make it eligible for copyright protection.

