

"Boston Tea Party"

"Boston Tea Party"

This is an image of a 1789 illustration of the "Boston Tea Party" event created by British engraver W.D. Cooper. The engraving was printed in The History of North America, which was printed in London, England.

The illustration shows Americans dressed as Indians throwing tea from a ship into Boston Harbor in 1773. Cooper titled the illustration "Americans throwing the Cargoes of the Tea Ships into the River, at Boston."

Citation (Chicago Style):

Cooper, W.D. "Boston Tea Party.". in The History of North America. 1789. Print: Engraving. Library of Congress: Rare Book and Special Collections Division, JPG, <https://www.loc.gov/item/2002718863/>

Available at:

<https://www.loc.gov/item/2002718863/>

Read the related article: Taxes, Trade, and Resistance

Usage Statement:

Public Domain

Public Domain is a copyright term that is often used when talking about copyright for creative works. Under U.S. copyright law, individual items that are in the public domain are items that are no longer protected by copyright law. This means that you do not need to request permission to re-use, re-publish or even change a copy of the item. Items enter the public domain under U.S. copyright law for a number of reasons: the original copyright may have expired; the item was created by the U.S. Federal Government or other governmental entity that views the things it creates as in the public domain; the work was never protected by copyright for some other reason related to how it was produced (for example, it was a speech that wasn't written down or recorded); or the work doesn't have enough originality to make it eligible for copyright protection.