

active reading ^[1]

Type of Speech:

noun ^[2]

Definition:

A manner of reading in which the reader is mentally engaged with a text and reads for comprehension and criticism as well as reads selectively and with a purpose.

Additional Information:

Active reading includes:

- applying what you know (prior knowledge)
- interacting with the author (responding critically to the text)
- predicting (trying to determine the importance of the selected text)
- solving problems (striving to understand confusing passages)
- summarizing (at the end of each page or where convenient)

In contrast, passive reading may be identified by reading for recreation, reading from start to finish, or reading with little mental engagement with a text.

Source URL: <https://www.ncpedia.org/glossary/active-reading>

Links

[1] <https://www.ncpedia.org/glossary/active-reading> [2] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/parts-speech/noun>