

cognitive academic language proficiency ^[1]

Type of Speech:

noun ^[2]

Definition:

Academic language students experience in school. CALP develops over a five to seven year period in the language acquisition of English (or foreign) language learners.

Additional Information:

CALP is more cognitively challenging than BICS in language acquisition, and is understood as a requirement for school success. See basic interpersonal communication skills ^[3].

Source URL: <https://www.ncpedia.org/glossary/cognitive-academic>

Links

[1] <https://www.ncpedia.org/glossary/cognitive-academic> [2] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/parts-speech/noun> [3] <https://www.ncpedia.org/glossary/basic-interpersonal-communication-skills>