^[3]The Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, known as Freemasons or Masons, is a secret fraternal society that has members in all parts of the world. The organization stresses the members' duty to their families, their country, and their fellow men and women, as well as the importance of religious belief. Each Freemason also pledges his allegiance to fellow members. The history of Freemasonry in the British colonies ^[4] of North America can be traced back to a very early period, and prior to 1735 the group was actively at work in North Carolina. By 1735 enough Masons had assembled in the Cape Fear settlement ^[5] to form a lodge. Saint John's Lodge of Wilmington ^[6], chartered in 1755, is the oldest Masonic lodge in continuous use in North Carolina. Several lodges existed prior to the Revolutionary War ^[7] throughout North Carolina. Royal White Hart Lodge No. 2. in the town of Halifax was chartered on 21 Aug. 1767 and is also still in existence.

The Grand Masonic Lodge of North Carolina ^[8] was organized in 1787. For many years the qualifications of the lodge's leader, or Grand Master, were that he should have played a prominent role in the Revolutionary War. The first master of this lodge was Samuel Johnston ^[9], a governor of North Carolina. The Grand Masonic Lodge was responsible for building a new Masonic Temple in Raleigh ^[10] ^[11] about 1909.

North Carolina Masons continue to meet at lodges in Salisbury, Asheboro, Charlotte ^[12], Asheville ^[13], Newton, Dunn, Garner, and dozens of other cities in the state. Their work remains charitable in nature, supporting several service projects and facilities, giving scholarships, and helping in times of emergency with disaster relief. The Masonic Home for Children in Oxford ^[14] and the Masonic and Eastern Star Home in Greensboro are two important Masonic facilities in the state.
