

George Moses Horton's Departing Love

George Moses Horton's "Departing Love"

George Moses Horton was enslaved in Chatham County, N.C during the early and mid 1800s. His work, The Hope of Liberty, was the first book published by a black author in North Carolina and even the South when it was published in 1829. It remains the only book published by an individual during their enslavement in the U.S.

Before the publication of his book, Horton wrote poems and acrostics on commission and sold them to students at UNC Chapel Hill in an effort to earn enough money to buy his freedom.

This poem, "Departing Love" was written by Horton and commissioned by Reverend Henry A. Dixon of Chapel Hill, N.C. to be given to his future bride, Martha Sugg.

Departing Love

With much delight I think of thee,
How'er far away;
I crave no other than to see,
And thru my love betray;
I yet my early hopes retain,
Farewell, till hence we meet again—

Ours, I never shall forget
My pleasures heretofore;
Thy beauties fly before me yet,
And hence I love thee more;
Sweeter is pleasures after pains
Farewell, untill we meet again—

Lovers may languish when they part,
But shortly after meet;
No pain to think, and death to part;
Still love continues sweet;
No flight shall break affection's chain,
Farewell, till hence we meet again—

I look'd back with a humid eye,
And drop'd departure's tear;
And from my bosom heave a sigh;
For one beloved so dear;
Greatest mistress of thy train
Farewell, till hence we meet again—

by Haughton, "The Colored bard
of N. Carolina"
August 1st 1858
Chapel Hill

Citation (Chicago Style):

Horton, George Moses. "Departing Love." Separated Folder 1: Departing Love by George Moses Horton: Scan 1. Separated Folder 1: Departing Love by George Moses Horton: Scan 2. 1851. George Moses Horton Poem #04799-z, Southern Historical Collection, The Wilson Library, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. <https://dc.lib.unc.edu/cdm/singleitem/collection/04ddd/id/451533/rec/4>. <https://dc.lib.unc.edu/cdm/singleitem/collection/04ddd/id/450357/rec/1>.

Transcript:

"Departing Love"

With much delight I think of thee,
How'er far away; I crave no other than to see,
And thru my love betray I yet my early hopes retain,
Farewell, till hence we meet again.

O no, I never shall forget
My pleasures heretofore;
Thy beauties fly before me yet,
And hence I love thee more;
Sweeter is pleasures after pain
Farewell, until we meet again.

Lovers may languish when they part,
But shortly after meet;
'Tis pain to think and death to part;
Still love continues sweet;
No flight shall break affections chain,
Farewell, till hence we meet again;

I look back with a humid eye,
And drop departure's tear;
And from my bosom heave a sigh;
Fore our beloved so dear;
Greatest mistress of thy train
Farewell, till hence we meet again.

by Haughton "The colored bard
of N. Carolina"
August 1st 1851
Chapel Hill

Usage Statement:

Public Domain

Public Domain is a copyright term that is often used when talking about copyright for creative works. Under U.S. copyright law, individual items that are in the public domain are items that are no longer protected by copyright law. This means that you do not need to request permission to re-use, re-publish or even change a copy of the item. Items enter the public domain under U.S. copyright law for a number of reasons: the original copyright may have expired; the item was created by the U.S. Federal Government or other governmental entity that views the things it creates as in the public domain; the work was never protected by copyright for some other reason related to how it was produced (for example, it was a speech that wasn't written down or recorded); or the work doesn't have enough originality to make it eligible for copyright protection.

Source URL: <https://www.ncpedia.org/media/horton-departing-love>