Martin Academy

by Nathaniel C. Hughes Jr., 2006

On 9 May 1783 the North Carolina General Assembly <sup>[2]</sup> granted a charter authorizing John Causon, Hezekiah Balch <sup>[3]</sup>, Samuel Doak <sup>[4]</sup>, and others to organize Martin Academy in Washington County <sup>[5]</sup> (now in Tennessee) in honor of Governor Alexander Martin <sup>[6]</sup>. The legislators made quite clear, however, that the state would not support the school in any way. The bill enabled the small school-previously founded in Salem <sup>[7]</sup> in 1780 by Doak, a Princeton <sup>[8]</sup> graduate and Presbyterian <sup>[9]</sup> minister-to become North Carolina's "first organized school west of the mountains." Two years later the State of Franklin <sup>[10]</sup> also granted a charter to Martin Academy, and in 1795 the academy attained college status. At this time the institution's name was changed to Washington College to honor the nation's first president.

With the exception of the Civil War <sup>[11]</sup> years, Washington College Academy <sup>[12]</sup> has been in continuous operation since its founding by Doak, evolving from a modest academy to a college to a privately owned secondary school. It is located near Jonesborough, Tenn.
