

Walton War ^[1]

Share it now!

Walton War

by Martin Reidinger, 2006

The Walton War was the name of a boundary dispute between North Carolina and Georgia ^[2] that flared into a brief but deadly armed conflict in 1804 in modern Transylvania County ^[3]. When the area was first being settled, there was uncertainty as to whether it was in South Carolina or North Carolina, with settlers having migrated to the area from both states. In 1797 surveyor John Clark Kirkpatrick made an attempt (as part of the surveying of the Indian line by Andrew Pickens for South Carolina and Benjamin Hawkins ^[4] for North Carolina) to ascertain the boundary between North Carolina and South Carolina. Kirkpatrick's line divided the settlement but left most of it in South Carolina.

In 1802 the portion of the settlement south of the line was ceded to Georgia as part of the federal agreement whereby Georgia ceded Alabama and Mississippi to the federal government. This settlement was then organized by the Georgia legislature as Walton County. Those holding North Carolina land grants ^[5] in the vicinity, however, did not recognize Georgia's authority over the area. This resulted in a number of incidents in December 1804 in which Walton County officials sought to impose Georgia law on the North Carolina settlers and collect taxes. In one of these confrontations, North Carolina constable John Hafner was killed when he was struck in the head with the butt of the musket of Georgia official Samuel McAdams. The North Carolina militia ^[6] was ordered into the area to arrest the offending Georgia officials. All of the Walton officers ultimately escaped from jail before trial and fled to Georgia and South Carolina because they were under capital indictment for Hafner's murder. This exertion of authority by North Carolina, however, demonstrated that the settlement was too remote from the seat of power in Georgia for that state to enforce any legitimate claim.

By 1807 Georgia and North Carolina had agreed that the dividing line between the two states should be the thirty-fifth parallel. A joint survey by the presidents of the University of Georgia ^[7] and the University of North Carolina ^[8] revealed that the entire settlement was in North Carolina. Georgia did not recognize the validity of this survey until 1811, when it was confirmed by an independent survey performed by Andrew Ellicott (who located the boundary at Ellicott's Rock).

Although the Georgians who had been arrested in Hafner's death had fled, North Carolina granted amnesty to the other Walton County officials and reintegrated them into the settlement.

Map of the boundaries of now-defunct Walton County in what is presently Transylvania County, N.C. Image from the N.C. Family Records Collection.

[9]

References:

Cal Carpenter, The Walton War and Tales of the Great Smoky Mountains(1979).

Martin Reidinger, The Walton War and the Georgia-North Carolina Boundary Dispute(1981).

Additional Resources:

McKown, Harry. "December 1804: The Walton War." This Month in North Carolina History [blog]. December 2006. <http://www.lib.unc.edu/ncc/ref/nchistory/dec2006/index.html> [10] (accessed September 13, 2012).

"Walton War." North Carolina Highway Historical Marker Program. <https://www.ncdcr.gov/about/history/division-historical-resources/nc-highway-historical-marker-program/Markers.aspx?ct=ddl&sp=search&k=Markers&sv=P-76> [11] (accessed September 13, 2012).

Parbs, Matt. "The Walton War and Ellicott's Rock." The National Museum of Surveying in Springfield, Illinois(blog). The National Museum of Surveying, Inc. January 6, 2011. <http://nationalmuseumofsurveying.blogspot.com/2011/01/walton-war-and-ellicotts-rock.html> [12]

Image Credits:

[Map showing Walton County and surrounding areas of Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Tennessee]. N.C. Image from the N.C. Family Records Collection. <http://digital.ncdcr.gov/u?p15012coll1.9609> [9]

Subjects:

Early Statehood \(1789-1820\) [13]

Geography [14]

Places [15]

UNC Press [16]

Authors:

Reidinger, Martin [17]

Origin - location:

Transylvania County [18]

From:

Encyclopedia of North Carolina, University of North Carolina Press.[19]

Source URL: <https://www.ncpedia.org/walton-war>

Links

- [1] <https://www.ncpedia.org/walton-war>
- [2] <http://www.georgiaencyclopedia.org/>
- [3] <https://www.ncpedia.org/geography/transylvania>
- [4] <https://www.ncpedia.org/biography/hawkins-benjamin>
- [5] <https://www.ncpedia.org/land-grants>
- [6] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/subjects/militia>
- [7] <http://www.uga.edu/>
- [8] <https://www.ncpedia.org/university-north-carolina-chapel-hi>
- [9] <http://digital.ncdcr.gov/u?p15012coll1,9609>
- [10] <http://www.lib.unc.edu/ncc/ref/nchistory/dec2006/index.html>
- [11] <https://www.ncdcr.gov/about/history/division-historical-resources/nc-highway-historical-marker-program/Markers.aspx?ct=ddl&sp=search&k=Markers&sv=P-76>
- [12] <http://nationalmuseumofsurveying.blogspot.com/2011/01/walton-war-and-ellicotts-rock.html>
- [13] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/subjects/early-statehood-1>
- [14] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/subjects/geography>
- [15] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/subjects/places>
- [16] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/subjects/unc-press>
- [17] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/authors/reidinger-martin>
- [18] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/origin-location/mountain-6>
- [19] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/entry-source/encyclopedia->