Gates County, located in the Coastal Plain ^[6] region of northeastern North Carolina, was formed in 1779 from parts of Chowan ^[11], Hertford ^[12], and Perquimans ^[14] Counties. Its northern border runs along the Virginia-North Carolina state line. It was named for General Horatio Gates, an American brigadier general in the Revolutionary War who led his troops to victory at the Battle of Saratoga in 1777. Gatesville has always been the county seat, although it was until 1831 called Gates Court House. Other Gates County communities include Eure, Hobbsville, Corapeake, and Sunbury.

Beginning in 1660, English colonists settled areas that had originally been inhabited by Nottoway, Meherrin ^[17], Chesapeake, Chowanoc ^[18], and Nansemond Indians. The economy of the county's rural communities was built around farming and timber. The coming of railroads in the late nineteenth century boosted the economy, as improved transportation made agriculture and lumbering more profitable. In the twentieth century, railroads were eventually superseded by highways, which allowed the cheaper option of truck shipment. Agriculture and lumbering are still the leading commercial enterprises in Gates County.

Gates County encompasses part of the Great Dismal Swamp National Wildlife Refuge ^[19], containing thousands of acres of forested wetlands. Other natural attractions in the county include Merchants Millpond State Park ^[20] and the Chowan Swamp Game Land ^[21]. Historic sites and cultural events include the Gates County Courthouse (1836) and the Fall Arts and Crafts Festival and the Gates County Swamp Fest. The population of Gates County was estimated to be 11,000 in 2004.
