^[2]Herbert Bemerton Battle, chemist and industrialist, was the fourth child and third son of Kemp Plummer Battle ^[3], president of The University of North Carolina ^[4] (1876–91), and Martha Ann Battle Battle (his parents were distant cousins). He was born at Chapel Hill in the cottage of his paternal grandfather, while Raleigh ^[5], where his parents then maintained their residence, was believed to be under threat of attack by Federal troops. His paternal grandfather, William Horn Battle ^[6], was a distinguished judge and law professor. His maternal grandfather was James Smith Battle ^[7], a planter and textile manufacturer of Edgecombe ^[8] and Nash counties ^[9]. His brothers were Kemp Plummer, Jr. ^[10], Thomas Hall ^[11], and William James. His sister, Nellie, married Dr. Richard Henry Lewis II ^[12].

Battle received his preparatory education at the Lovejoy Academy ^[13], Raleigh. He early evidenced a strong interest in the sciences, especially chemistry. Following his graduation from The University of North Carolina with the B.S. degree (1881), he served from 1881 to 1887 as assistant chemist at the North Carolina ^[14] Agricultural Experiment Station ^[14]. In 1887 he was awarded his Ph.D. by the university and became state chemist and director of the Agricultural Experiment Station. He served there until the Republican ^[15] administration of Governor Daniel L. Russell ^[16] abolished his position (he being a Democrat ^[17]) and assigned his duties to the Agricultural and Mechanical College ^[18]. Battle then organized and became president and manager of the Southern Chemical Company, Winston ^[19], which manufactured agricultural

In 1906 he organized at Montgomery the Battle Laboratory, of which he became president, a position he retained until his death at Montgomery. He was buried in Oakwood Cemetery ^[22] in Raleigh.

A member of several professional organizations, he contributed numerous articles to scientific journals and coauthored (with F. B. Dancy) Chemical Conversion Tables ^[23] (1885) and (with W. J. Gascoyne) Chemical Conversion Tables ^[24] (1909). He was a charter member of the North ^[25] Carolina Sons of the Revolution ^[25] and was active in the promotion of various civic causes. A devout Episcopalian ^[26], he attended the services of his church regularly, gave liberally to its financial support, and participated in its activities. On 25 Nov. 1885, he married ^[27] Alice Matilda Wilson, a native of Statesville and at the time a resident of Morganton. She was a daughter of James W. Wilson ^[28], chairman of the North Carolina Railroad Commission ^[29] and president of the Western North Carolina Railroad ^[30]. Herbert and Alice Battle were the parents of James Wilson and Nellie Lewis, wife of John Manning Booker. Mrs. Battle died in 1919.

A photograph of Herbert Bemerton Battle serves as the frontispiece of The Battle Book: A Genealogy of the Battle Family in America . . . (1930) ^[31], which he "planned and in great part executed." At the time of his death, a tribute in the Montgomery Advertiser ^[32] (8 July 1929) described him as a "citizen who builded up his town" and predicted, "Montgomery will miss Dr. Herbert B. Battle, but it will not forget him, for his memory will ever abide as a strengthening and comforting influence."
