

Borland, Solon ^[1]

Borland, Solon

by Thomas C. Parramore, 1979; Revised November 2022.

11 Aug. 1811–31 Jan. 1864

Solon Borland. Image courtesy of the Library of Congress.

^[2]Solon Borland was a U.S. senator, diplomat, attorney, physician, Confederate ^[3] general, journalist, and enslaver. He was born in Nansemond County, Va. In about 1818, his parents, Dr. Thomas Borland, a native of Scotland, and Harriet Godwin Borland, moved with their three sons to Murfreesboro, where Solon was to spend his next sixteen years. Solon was educated at Hertford Academy in Murfreesboro. He gained a brief notoriety in 1827 when, following an altercation with Murfreesboro merchant James Morgan, Solon and an older brother attacked Morgan with a knife and almost killed him.

In 1831, Borland was an officer in a Murfreesboro cavalry company that took part in the suppression of Nat Turner's Revolt ^[4] in nearby Southampton County, Va. Again Borland's name was before the public when he and members of his detachment accused members of another detachment of robbing the bodies of murdered black people. This theft of bodies violated the property rights of the enslavers during the period. At a July fourth celebration near Murfreesboro in 1831, Borland was one of several orators of the day.

In 1836, Borland went to Philadelphia for medical training; he practiced briefly after that in Virginia as a dentist and later practiced as a physician. A monograph he published in Arkansas in 1845, entitled The Milk Sickness in Humans, or the Trembles in Animals, is thought to have been the first scientific work published in that state. Previously, however, he had become active in journalism. His first journalistic venture is said to have been the founding of a newspaper at Portsmouth, Va., probably in the early 1830s. In 1839 he became editor of the Memphis (Tenn.) Western World and Solon Borland.

Biographical Directory of the United States Congress.

^[5]subsequently held editorial positions in Kentucky and in Little Rock, Ark. Borland was a presidential elector in Arkansas in 1845 and in the following year raised a cavalry company there for service in the Mexican War [6]. Appointed to the U.S. Senate following the resignation of A. H. Sevier [7] in 1848, Borland won election in his own right in 1849 and served until his own resignation in 1853. He was appointed in the same year minister to Central America and, during his term, was a principal in the circumstances leading to the destruction of Greytown in 1854 by the U.S.S. Cyane. Borland was offered the governorship of the Territory of New Mexico but declined in order to practice law in Little Rock.

In the spring of 1861, prior to the secession of Arkansas from the Union, Borland organized a body of troops and took possession of Fort Smith [8] for the Confederacy. He afterward became colonel of the Third Arkansas Cavalry, a unit he personally recruited. He died while on service in Texas in 1864.

Borland was married three times: to Mrs. Huldah Wright of Suffolk, Va., by whom he had two sons; to a Mrs. Hunt of Tennessee; and to Mary J. Melbourne of Little Rock, by whom he had another son and two daughters.

References:

DAB, vol. 2 (1929).

Memphis Arkansas and Ouachita Christian Advocate, 9 June 1859.

Nat. Cyc. Am. Biog., vol. 4 (1899 [portrait]).

William D. Valentine, Diary for 10 May 1848 (Southern Historical Collection, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill).

Additional Resources:

Woods, James M. "Expansionism as Diplomacy: The Career of Solon Borland in Central America 1853-1854." Americas 40 (January 1984): 399-415.

Solon Borland (1811–1864), The Encyclopedia of Arkansas History and Culture:
<http://www.encyclopediaofarkansas.net/encyclopedia/entry-detail.aspx?entryID=1595> [9]

"Borland, Solon, (1808 - 1864)." Biographical Directory of the United States Congress. Washington, D.C.: The Congress.
<http://bioguide.congress.gov/scripts/biodisplay.pl?index=b000642> [5] (accessed April 26, 2013).

Image Credits:

Solon Borland, half-length portrait, facing three-quarters left, Library of Congress:
<http://www.loc.gov/pictures/item/2004663881/> [10] (accessed April 26, 2013).

"Borland, Solon, (1808 - 1864)." Biographical Directory of the United States Congress. Washington, D.C.: The Congress.
<http://bioguide.congress.gov/scripts/biodisplay.pl?index=b000642> [5] (accessed April 26, 2013).

Subjects:

Biographies [11]

Civil War (1861-1865) [12]

Military personnel [13]

Newspapers and magazines [14]

Public officials [15]

Writers, journalists, and editors [16]

Authors:

Parramore, Thomas C. [17]

Origin - location:

Hertford County [18]

From:

Dictionary of North Carolina Biography, University of North Carolina Press. [19]

1 January 1979 | Parramore, Thomas C.

Source URL: <https://www.ncpedia.org/biography/borland-solon?page=0>

Links

[1] <https://www.ncpedia.org/biography/borland-solon> [2] <http://www.loc.gov/pictures/resource/cph.3c09949/> [3] <https://www.ncpedia.org/confederate-party> [4] <http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/aia/part3/3p1518.html> [5] <http://bioguide.congress.gov/scripts/biodisplay.pl?index=b000642> [6] <https://www.ncpedia.org/mexican-war> [7] <http://www.arkansasties.com/People/Sevier,Ambrose.htm> [8] <http://www.fortsmithar.gov/> [9] <http://www.encyclopediaofarkansas.net/encyclopedia/entry-detail.aspx?entryID=1595> [10] <http://www.loc.gov/pictures/item/2004663881/> [11] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/subjects/biography-term> [12] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/subjects/civil-war> [13] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/subjects/soldiers> [14] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/subjects/newspapers> [15] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/subjects/public-officials> [16] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/subjects/writer> [17] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/authors/parramore-thomas-c> [18] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/origin-location/coastal-32> [19] <https://www.ncpedia.org/category/entry-source/dictionary-no>