In October 1898 Horner was elected bishop of the Missionary District of Asheville <sup>[9]</sup> by the General Convention meeting in Washington, D.C.; he was consecrated in Asheville on 28 December. In 1899 the University of the South granted him the doctor of divinity degree. When the missionary district was reorganized in 1922, he became bishop of the Diocese of Western North Carolina. Although Horner had limited experience in parish leadership, he had the training and ability necessary to succeed. He set about expanding the work of the church and soon established preaching stations, missions, parishes, and, dear to his heart, schools to offer industrial training not otherwise available to the young people of the mountains of North Carolina. With that special education, of course, they also received religious and moral training.

On 14 Dec. 1892 Horner married Eva Harker <sup>[10]</sup> of Augusta, Ga., and they became the parents of Eva, Katherine, and Junius.
