William Edgar White, furniture manufacturer [3], was born in Mebane, the son of Stephen Alexander and Mary Jane Woods White. He received his education at the Bingham Military Academy [4], located near his home, before working as a telegraph [5] operator for the Southern Railway [6] until 1881. With his brother, David A., and a capital investment of $420, he then established the White Furniture Company [2], of which he was president until his death over half a century later. The company made furniture of the highest quality and earned an international reputation.

As a Republican [7] White was active in local political affairs and a member of the school board; he was a director of the State Fair [8] and helped organize the Mebane tobacco market. A member of the Presbyterian church [9], he was involved in its work. White never married. The White Furniture Company ceased operations in 1994.
